Dedication

Because behind his severity there was consideration, and despite his gruffness, kindness and good humor, and within his brusqueness a heart of gold, the students of Detroit College of Law, who came gradually to a realization of the high worth of this gentleman, feel it a privilege to dedicate the Forum of nineteen hundred thirty as a slight evidence of their admiration and esteem to Professor John J. Danhof.

THE SENIOR CLASS OF JUNE, 1930

As we nearer approach the open door of graduation, and our turn at the bar, we restfully pause to gaze into the invisible future and subconsciously muse at its vastness and the mystery of it all. Some of us will rise well up into the Sun of our profession. But who amongst us will that be? Then too, there are some of us who will carry their equipment far into the Suns of other fields of endeavor, and we know not where our success ends or how, for the Gods have so wished it.

Let us turn for a moment and recall a few memories to our mind. How well we see ourselves treading upon the first premises of our chosen future, how we zealously ground away at facts and legal principles, mastered our inclinations to be careless and lazy, only to become active and particular. We can see clearly now, why we were urged so frequently to give our best efforts. We appreciate the importance of it all.

Thus, before we leave our resting place, let us bid farewell to those noble characters who gave their time and knowledge, that we may carry on the high ideals of our calling. Beyond question, our work here has been doubly profitable. We have our professional training on one side, and the many staunch friendships we have made on the other. How much we owe our Alma Mater we can only repay by heaping credit upon ourselves as men, and the law as honest practitioners, and abiders of it.

Let us always respect law and order, and conduct ourselves accordingly. Inspire respect in our fellow men and we shall inspire respect for ourselves. Prove ourselves genuine men and we shall command the respect of all. By so doing, we place the practice of the law and its traditions far above reproach and to the benefit of all mankind.

Treasurer	WILLIAM H. BROWN

ID-YEAR SENIORS, that sounds excellent, but with it comes the not so happy thought that soon we will not be Mid-Year Seniors, or any Seniors—only memories—the Class of February, '31.

'Tis but human to look back over the steps that one has taken toward a definite goal, especially when that goal is almost achieved. Once upon a time there were some individuals with a desire to attain legal skill and training, and so our class was started. Studying, briefs, new friends, hurrying to classes, trying to find them, and then came the professors. We were impressed by the fact that these men, busy in the profession, devoted their time and energy to propounding principles of law to us. Their zeal inspired many of us to carry on. So we became sophomores; then juniors, and now seniors.

Progress always leaves regrets, that of departing from the guidance of the men from whom we have attained far more than law, that of leaving this College with its intangible something that is not talked of, but felt. It is portrayed in the greetings of the students, the friends that are won there, the forbidden classroom conversations, the good-natured jostling of the crowd between classes, and the social functions. It is called "Spirit," is it?

The four long years have now become four short ones, a curious trick of mind, yet we have many memories stored away. So, with regrets and hopes, we soon leave to do battle, legal battle, with the world, fortified by our associations at this institution.

Since this is our farewell, why bother with extolling the merits of our class? They are well known; it is a good class, tried and not found wanting, else we would not be saying adieu.

AND now—a word or two about the Junior Class. Originally a class of over one hundred, our ranks have gradually dwindled until now only about one-half of the original group answers the daily call to arms. In passing we want to say that it has been with much regret that we have had to say adieu to some of our former classmates. Some have left to give their undivided attention to affairs that demand it, while others have transferred their activities to other localities or institutions. In any event we are confident that the same earnest purpose that was with them here, will attend them wherever they go.

• Among those that remain there has gradually grown a fire of real friendship, kindled by a feeling of human understanding and unselfish admiration, for the sterling qualities that are so readily manifest in young men who are ready and willing to devote their time to the study and practice of the law.

In class politics especially a spirit of keen but good-natured rivalry has caused considerable lobbying and campaigning among the opposing factions. From the torrid heat of battle, campaign speeches, recunts, etc., the following men emerged triumphant in the recent class elections: Walton Moore, President; Louis Kaplan, Vice-President; Weston Sheldon, Secretary; Marvin Ransom, Treasurer.

Led by these men and with the aid of the night class several social functions were sponsored during the year, and, judging by the enthusiasm of those present, similar events will be in order next year.

The most successful of these parties was the annual J-Hop, which was given on May 23 in the Fountain Room of the Masonic Temple. Far into the night gay young couples tripped a light fantastic to the haunting melodies portrayed by Jack McGay and his orchestra. The room was very attractively decorated, and numbered among those present were many prominent members of the Bench and Bar.

Already members of the class are looking forward eagerly to the time when they will return as full fledged seniors, which in itself is a distinction in a law school whose standards have always been and will continue to be the very highest. May we be able to hurdle that last great barrier of legal complexity as successfully as we have those preceding.

T the opening of the school year, 1929 found us ready to start back in the regular routine, pepped up 10 per cent. Our ranks had slightly decreased, but those who remained were tried and true.

We got under way by having our first class meeting and nominating several men for each class office. Then followed a week of strenuous campaigning and lobbying, after which followed the regular election. It was a heated contest, mud slinging prevailed, tempers were lost, and enemies were made. The meeting was held behind closed doors, noses counted, and votes challenged. After the roar of guns had died away, and the smoke had settled, it was discovered that Casler was to head the class as President, Hodge as Vice-President, Schwemler as Treasurer, and McInally as Secretary.

We had just nicely got under way when Eddie Scott, representing the class as a body, filed a bill before Honorable Raymond E. Van Sickle for a divorce from the Detroit College of Law. After the bill was filed, Attorney Scott refused to proceed with the case until the plaintiff could raise sufficient funds to pay him a retainer's fee. At the present writing the plaintiff has been unable to do so and has therefore been compelled to live with the defendant and will continue to do so until such times as such funds shall be forthcoming.

The next class function was the Annual Junior Faculty Smoker. This was held on Friday, the thirteenth of February, in the French Room of the Wolverine Hotel. The Junior Day and Night classes of '31 were well represented.

The purpose of this class function was to promote a better social contact and understanding between the two Junior classes and the results proved that our plans were successful.

We were honored by the presence of Dean Krichbaum, Professor Roberts, Professor Van Sickle, and Professor Drexilius, who acted as toastmasters of the evening. The speeches given by the guests, though short, were very interesting and educational and, of course, smattered with humor.

High class entertainment was obtained, and judging from the hand given to the entertainers by the students, they certainly displayed their talent well.

Never yet has any class function had as large a turn-out of students as attended the Junior Faculty Smoker, and by unanimous consent it was voted a huge success. It is the desire of the officers and students of the Junior Class that the establishment of this social precedent will be followed by the succeeding classes and thus making the Faculty Smoker an annual affair.

Then followed the semester exams, and after a brief pause we started back full speed ahead for the last semester of our Junior year.

The next event was a Junior Day and Night Class Dinner Dance, engineered by John Dollar and his able assistants, at the Oriole Terrace on March 12, 1930. All classes were well represented, in fact, the number that came exceeded the expectations and taxed the capacity of the private dining room engaged for the occasion.

After enough furniture had been moved in to seat the sixty-five couples who were present, a special dinner was served. Between courses there was dancing in the main dining room.

Somewhere between the salad and the coffee the guests of honor were briefly introduced and as briefly responded. Judge Homer Ferguson and Dean Krichbaum were genial, even though brief. A few more after-dinner speakers of their judgment and ability are needed quite as much in this country as Thomas Marshall's famous "good five-cent cigar."

Dinner over, most of the guests took up dancing seriously. Ira Hayes is said to have taken to dancing in a "big way." The Dean had a ringside seat and smiled contentedly at the dancers through a blue haze of cigar smoke. The embryo politicians, meantime, had maneuvered Judge Ferguson into a corner and went joyously to work on the judicial system. His Honor defended the system valiantly. Back at the speakers' table, Mrs. Ferguson was making conversation more attractive than dancing and was being ably assisted by Mrs. Wetmore and Miss Mooney.

There was a general adjournment to the main dining room to see the six acts of vaudeville, and as no member of the party attempted to imitate the acrobats, there were no casualties.

Slowly, reluctantly, the party broke up and two by two went home. John Dollar had to stay and meet the bad news. He left after the second show, ransomed his overcoat, and went directly to work.

We are anxiously awaiting the expiration of this semester's hard labor, when we will enter upon the home stretch of the four-mile track at Detroit College of Law.

MID-YEAR JUNIORS

ORWARD! The word is significant of our destiny. We, the February Junior Class, have "crossed the Rubicon." After two years of study, we at last apprehend that we are approaching our destination and must carry on, in pursuit of our coveted "LL.B."

It is two years since we entered this institution of learning and resolved to study the law, yet not one of us regrets our resolution, although we daily realize our increased responsibilities, both to the profession and to ourselves; therefore, it is our duty to proceed deeper into the unknown territories of the law in an attempt to conquer whatever remains undisclosed.

As Juniors, it is our intention to move forward, to uphold all of the traditions handed down to us by our legal forebears and, in accordance with such intentions, we have taken the initiative. We have elected competent class officers to succeed those who have passed on to higher fields of endeavor in the law, and under their leadership we feel secure in our expectation of greater accomplishments. We have made plans, in co-operation with our officers, for a greater year, scholastically and socially, which should, as a result, advance our interests as individuals and enable us to attain our objective as a group.

In attempting to reach the pinnacle, we have not proceeded with the selfish thought of present rewards, but a remuneration far greater, which, at the expiration of our term, shall leave a footprint on the "sands of time," and a memory for those who follow that will establish a precedent necessary to the constant uplift of standards and ideals, not only for our immediate successors, but for every future Junior Class.

While we can presently look with pride upon the fine traditions of our predecessors, we also feel a duty incumbent upon us to blaze new trails, to attain progress, for we know that in progress lies success and in success our destination.

FORWARD! Let that ever-inspiring word be our guide, so that when our mission is accomplished and we shall have departed this earth to the Ruler of the Great Courtroom above, our record shall be our proudest monument.

JAMES E. DELANEY.

SEPTEMBER SOPHOMORES

THE sophomore day class assembled for the start of its second year at the Detroit College of Law in September minus a few of its members from the year before but augmented with a few transfers from other colleges. Two weeks later the election of class officers took place. All offices were hotly contested, and after the smoke had cleared the selections were: President, James M. Flynn; Vice-President, Louis Bailey; Secretary, Richard Nahabedian; Treasurer, George Johnson. James O. Delan, our hard-working school teacher from Wyandotte, was then unanimously elected sergeant-at-arms.

Early in the Fall, Homer Bliss, president of the night class, and Jim Flynn, of the day class, conceived the idea of holding a joint get-together for both classes. The party was staged at the Wolverine hotel and through coincidence the mid-year sophomore class was there also, so the party resulted in a real get-together for all three classes. Among the guests present were: Dean Krichbaum, Judge Homer Ferguson, Judge William C. Markley, and Peter Drexilius.

Winniett Wright, of this class, was chosen by the student council as chairman of the annual reunion. That event took place in the Players playhouse, with Judge Marcus Kavanaugh of Chicago superior court as speaker. The event was a decided departure from the old cut-and-dried method for such occasions and this class feels that it has proven to the alumni and the students that the students themselves can entertain without the aid of professional talent.

We are looking forward to the honor of sponsoring the J-Hop next year and feel certain that we will exhibit the same degree of precision and care in that function, that was the chief cause for the success of the reunion this year.

At the outset every historian is confronted with the problem: Do great men make history or is history the mother of the activities and achievements of its stellar lights? A chronicle of the activities of the class of 1932 is necessarily a brief record because the class is but a child of tender years. It might be said now that due to its extreme youth it lacks sufficient problems to demand the achievements of individuals to meet them. Likewise, it might be said that there has hardly been time for any of its individuals to write any momentous events upon its pages.

However, there have been events. Perhaps the most astonishing event is the goodly number of its members who became Sophomores at the close of the Freshman year. Equally astonishing is the number of its members who returned to continue their studies the second year. Perhaps benevolence has its reward.

During the first year two social events were its own: The Frosh Frolic, which was nothing but a noisy mob scene held in a room much too small, at the Detroit Leland, and the smoker which was a closed event, at the Wolverine, patronized by Drexelius and Roberts. The latter was more reassuring and restored faith which the former had destroyed. It is needless to say that certain individuals, though not members of the class, stand out in the memories of that first year. Judge Brennan and his positive lectures, Peter Drexelius and his Latin, Professor Van Sickle and his common-law marriages, his examinations, and his gum drops will all remain.

The second year found the class, in the main, intact. A few left and are missed; Harry Orcutt, Paul Fandrich. New names were added to the roll; some just beginning, but for the most part left-overs from the classes above. Two social events have thus far passed: a smoker, to be remembered for the activities of two feminine guests, and for the colossal capacity of one Schultz, and the reunion. That latter event was carried off in fine shape, due to the untiring efforts of one Wright. It was well attended by both the bar and the under-bar; it was held at the Players, and was enjoyed by many prominent citizens who not only attended but participated in its activities; it was novel. The Honorable Judge Kavanagh was the honored speaker, with Judge Monaghan offering the toasts. If an historian may be a prophet we would say that certain individuals, though not members of the class, will go on in its memory; John C. Shields and his concise, but deliberate sessions, the Honorable Judge Aldrich and his distinguished judicial manner, the Dean and his Evidence Classes, Oliver Marcks and his keen, pointed "Harvard Equity."

LUNE will bring to a close the third semester of this our class of February, '33. Three down and five to go, and even tho' the ascent grows steeper we know that we will not rest until those five more semesters are conquered. Yes, conquered, for frankly we all know the path of learning is not strewn with roses. But I'm forgetting our smoker, that was not so hard to take: we did have a good time at that, our one social function, or shall I say "get-together"? that's what it was, a real get-together. The ice was broken and we were all in the swim and liking it, then it was, we discovered, unless fortunate enough to do so earlier what all around good fellows we have as classmates.

One of our budding young journalists with an eye to collecting statistics, circulated among us a paper on which our names, home-towns, high schools and colleges were to be inscribed, and those of us so inclined did so inscribe them. The results were not altogether what might be hoped for and yet the data so collected was useful as a very general survey. We might feel secure in drawing the conclusion that for the most part our fellow-classmates are Detroit men, mostly educated in Detroit Colleges or in the University of Michigan, and that a smaller percent are from towns and cities in Michigan, Illinois and Indiana.

We have in our midst men who have attended Universities scattered thro' the United States and even abroad.

THE Afternoon section of the class of June, 1933, held its first meeting early in October, 1929, at which time the officers were elected and tentative plans for a smoker were considered.

When, late in November, the Evening section proposed that the two sections join in the promotion of the project, the opportunity was welcomed, for it was felt that by so doing, an opportunity would be afforded whereby both sections would become better acquainted.

Judging from the number present from both classes, the affair was a success, and the speeches by members of the faculty and Samuel J. Patterson, alumnus, and prominent members of the Pontiac bar, met with the hearty approval of all present. Through the efforts of C. H. Dusenberry, President of the Evening section, a band composed of members of the Pontiac Kiwanis Club, furnished the music for the evening.

At present the class is considering an informal faculty dinner, at which it is hoped that the members will become better acquainted with the faculty.

It has been the aim of the class to endeavor to promote high scholarship, and to co-operate both within itself and with its instructors to the end that this ideal may be realized.

FRESHMAN NIGHT CLASS

SPLENDID class interest has been shown since the election, all factions uniting under the new officers and even with the outside adverse business conditions, have been able to make an outstanding year both in college work and social activities.

The class has also endeavored to keep in mind the good fellowship of benevolence and have always been alert to the situation, when any of its members have been confined to their homes or in the hospital.

Under the leadership of the Class President and his officers, a most enjoyable party was successfully put across at the Wolverine Hotel. An invitation was extended to P. J. Horler, president of the day class, for his class to join with us, which they did and a most enjoyable evening was experienced.

Under the direction of our President, the Kiwanis International Orchestra of Pontiac, Michigan, an organization of 14 musicians, furnished an exceptional program of music for the banquet and singing.

Edgar Cecil Crawle, of Penzance, England, presented some very brilliant and entertaining numbers on the grand piano.

Dean William Krichbaum, Dean of the College, represented the faculty and gave a very interesting as well as valuable talk to the students.

Attorney Samuel J. Patterson, prominent member of the Oakland County Bar Association, gave a very interesting as well as instructive talk on "Theory and Practical Experience After Graduation." Mr. Patterson is an alumnus of '97.

Attorney Peter J. Drexelius, a member of the faculty, and one whom we all love, acted as our toastmaster, and our "Pete" sure takes the blue ribbon in this capacity, and is the life of the party. He introduced the following members of the Legal Fraternity who responded with short talks:

Hon. Judge Homer J. Ferguson, Attorney Loren Weber, member of Faculty; Hon. Judge William Markley, Attorney Bliss Giles, member of Faculty.

Our officers had arranged more social activities but after consultation with the Dean, it was decided to hold off till a later date, at least until after the College Reunion.

We have a very fine class quartette composed of Geo. Isley, 1st tenor; Theodore Hillstrom, 2nd tenor; Donald Phillips, baritone; Clarence Dusenberry, bass.

They have appeared a number of times at outside functions and have been warmly praised for their splendid work.

Our class has been very active in College affairs, always being ready to help in anything that would promote the College in general and enliven inter-class spirit, this being shown in our one hundred per cent support of the Sophomore Reunion.

The personnel of the class is of the highest standard, the men of the highest caliber and the officers consider it a privilege to serve a class that without a doubt, some day, will be the outstanding men in their respective communities.

President	CHARLES H. KING
Vice-President	ASA T. WRIGHT
Secretary and Treasurer	FREDERICK A. THOMPSON

IN February 10, 1930, the Detroit College of Law witnessed the entry of one of the largest mid-year freshman classes in the history of the college. Over eighty bold freshmen entered its portals, eager to pursue the intricacies of the law, and hoping that, some time in the dim future, they might be able to do their part in carrying on the traditions and the ideals of the most noble profession of them all. At the time of this writing, the class has not acquired any great fund of legal lore, but we have made at least a fine start. Under able tutelage, we have absorbed Judge Brennan's interpretation of the law of personal property; we have been told what Mr. Roberts thinks of agency, and have memorized, and politely laughed at most of Mr. Van Syckle's jokes. Mr. Weber has enlightened us somewhat about his favorite Igorotes, and Dean Krichbaum has been insistent that we learn that smoking is tabu in the halls. We are confident—and we hope not overly so—that the learning and wisdom of the legal profession will be preserved for this generation at least.

Having been here only a short time, no class events have taken place, and our record is rather blank. But we do have one honor of which even the senior class cannot boast—no student has failed or even been conditioned in a single subject. Of course, the fact that we have had no examinations may have had some influence, but be that as it may, this Freshman class has started out with the honest and sincere intention of being a record class, both socially and intellectually.

The election of class officers was held early in the semester. Mr. Charles H. King was elected President, and to assist him in the conducting of class affairs, Mr. Asa T. Wright was chosen as Vice-President, and Mr. Frederick A. Thomson as Secretary and Treasurer. Mr. King and his associates have thus far led the class in a very fitting manner during the short time, that they have been in office, and we are sure that they will continue to do their utmost in helping us to achieve that honor and dignity that is so closely allied with the profession of the law.

THE DETROIT COLLEGE OF LAW

THE incorporation of the Detroit College of Law in 1891 came as the culmination of the efforts of several public-spirited lawyers, including the noted text-writer and teacher, Mr. Floyd Mechem, now deceased, to bring to those many individuals wishing to acquire some knowledge of the law and having access to the many law offices and courts in the City of Detroit, a systematized prosecution of the study of the law under a select group of the judges and practicing attorneys available in the district. Mr. Mechem, instrumental in its organization, continued as a teacher at the College, occupying the office of Dean for about a year after the formal opening on the 20th of December, 1891.

When first organized the College secured quarters in the building occupied by the Detroit College of Medicine at the corner of St. Antoine and Mullett streets. The course, as first offered, required two years' work with recitations three evenings each week for a two-hour period each evening. The course was extended to three years in 1897 and recitations held five evenings each week. Becoming more and more popular as a law school, the first day school was added in 1910, the courses offered being the same in both sections.

From 1891 to 1915 the College was privately owned and controlled by Mr. Malcolm McGregor and Mr. William C. Wetherbee, prominent lawyers in the City, both of whom were responsible for the organization and success of the College.

In 1915 the College passed to the control of the trustees of the Detroit Young Men's Christian Association, at which time the library was turned over to the Detroit Bar Association Library, of which it now forms a part. The present library was gathered after the time of this change of control in 1915. It was soon after this that the College was moved to its present quarters adjacent to the Main Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association in Detroit.

The conviction of the founders of the Detroit College of Law, that leaders of the bench and bar would be available as members of the newly founded institution, was no error, as is evident when among their number are mentioned such men as Justices Charles D. Long, William L. Carpenter and Flavius L. Brooks, of the Supreme Court of Michigan; Judges Alexis C. Angell and Arthur J. Tuttle, of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan; Judges Alfred J. Murphy, Philip T. Van Zile and Harry J. Dingeman, and such practitioners as Alfred Lucking, Frank E. Robson, Fred A. Baker, John D. Conely, Jasper C. Gates, Elisha A. Fraser, John W. Beaumont, Clarence T. Lightner, Seward L. Merriam, T. A. E. Weadock, Alfred Russell, Col. John Atkinson, R. A. Parker, Thomas T. Leete, Clarence M. Burton and many others. The later Floyd R. Mechem, Philip T. Van Zile, John C. Bills, William S. Sayres and William Kirchbaum have held the office of Dean from 1891 to date. Mr. Mechem administering such duties until 1892, Judge Van Zile to 1915; between 1915 and 1916 John C. Bills acted as Dean, following the death of Judge Van Zile, and until the appointment in 1916 of William S. Sayres, present acting Master in Chancery in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan, who occupied the position until 1917; since that time Dean Krichbaum has executed the duties of the office.

During the last few years several notable changes have been made in the administration, none less important than the increase in the amount of preliminary education necessary before entrance. It is the intention of the Board of Trustees to raise the present standards so that for the school year of 1930-31 two years of college work will be necessary to admittance, and in 1935 one hundred and twenty hours, or a full college course, will be required for enrollment.

It has always been the policy of the College to keep in line with the accepted and modern ideas in legal education. In adopting the case system in most courses the College follows the prevailing notion among the leading law schools and teachers in the country. In some courses the case system accompanied by a text forms a harmonious combination of the two systems.

The question as to whether or not a law school of the type of the Detroit College of Law is advisable or successful is best answered by the mere mention of the members of its alumni on the bench and prominent at the bar and in business circles. While there are in attendance at the College many students who are financially able to attend any law school, the peculiar office of this institution has been to offer a sound legal training to students who are required to support themselves during the period of their studies, and to whom the opportunities of self-support found in Detroit are invaluable. The success of such men in practice and their standing as citizens after leaving the school, are sufficient proof of the wisdom of offering them an opportunity to obtain a legal education.

AFTER a four-year transitory period, the Brief Case is now firmly established as the law review of the Detroit College of Law.

Starting in November, 1926, as a paper devoted to school news, the Brief Case is now the outstanding legal publication in the City of Detroit.

The year 1929-30 was particularly progressive. Not only was each issue featured with a leading legal treatise, but the supplementary material was of equal importance. And to the student and lawyer, the Brief Case was of equal interest.

The Brief Case has received communications from all parts of the country commenting on the various aspects of the paper.

The staff acknowledges great indebtedness to its contributors, who have spent no little time and energy in compiling their contributions.

To Irving S. Wolfe, '30, Editor-in-Chief, goes the credit for organizing such a splendid staff. And to the staff as a whole goes the credit for establishing a paper worthy of being referred to as the legal publication of the Detroit College of Law.

D.C.L. NIGHT AT THE DETROIT REPERTORY THEATRE

NO account of the year 1929-30 would be complete without mention of the Detroit College of Law night at the Detroit Repertory Theater. The first occasion of its kind, it proved to be such a fine evening that it is hoped the affair may be repeated in other years.

The presentation was one of especial interest to law students and attorneys, it being "The Sabine Women," by the Russian playwright, Leonid Andreyeff. The whole story is highly satirical and humorous throughout, depicting the trials and tribulations of the Sabine men, when the Roman soldiers, having founded an empire by force of arms, seek to perpetuate it by taking to themselves some wives, and select the beautiful Sabine spouses.

Hardened soldiers, who have campaigned so long that they have forgotten the dainty methods of courtship, use the only method with which they are familiar, and swoop down upon the Sabines, taking the women by force, and carrying them off amid feminine shrieks and the wordy remonstrances of the husbands.

Andreyeff has an ax to grind, apparently, for he shows that the Sabine men, having elevated book-wisdom above all other values, have brought physical deterioration upon themselves, and a consequent inability to meet the forceful rush of the burly Romans. It is only a matter of time when the stolen women have forgotten their husbands, and are blissfully established as the wives of their strong abductors.

After the passage of a year or so, the Sabine men, armed with ponderous law books, and treatises in which they have exhausted all the known legal arguments against the crime of abduction, appear on the scene to reclaim their wives, not by force, but by entreaty and debate. The Romans, in the meantime, domesticated as they have never been before, have lost their former physical greatness, and are well on the way to becoming as soft and effeminate as the Sabine men.

The whole play would probably point out Andreyeff's notion of the deteriorating effect of domestication upon erstwhile strong men.

Playwright Andreyeff was a lawyer—an unsuccessful lawyer. The performance was in charge of the law students, and many D. C. L. students took part in the play.

Winnieth Wright, director of the Repertory, also took the prominent role of Scipio. Other students participating were Elmer "Tiny" Broker as a Roman soldier, Dale Dohn as Paulus, Smith Ira Champlin as the Sabine professor, and Mott as one of the Sabine husbands. Jefferson Hoxie was chairman of the affair.

Also of interest to law students was a one act play by Russell McLaughlin, a member of the Detroit bar, and now dramatic critic on the Detroit News. He called his piece "Hell" and ably delineated the reactions of three former residents of the earth upon finding themselves confined to the darker and, reputedly, hotter regions.

The entertainment was well attended and all in all proved a complete success.

ANNUAL REUNION

REUNION COMMITTEE

W. Wright, Chairman

SOMETHING new in Reunions was staged this year, when the annual event was held in the Players Playhouse, on East Jefferson Avenue, the evening of April 25. It would sound like a shallow repetition to say the affair was the "biggest and best ever held," but in all justice it must be marked down as one of the outstanding successes of recent years.

Every phase of the party was handled wisely and efficiently. It was the plan of the committee to get away from the usual conception of the Reunion, and to make the entertainment unique. Sometimes we lose sight of the fact that the Reunion is largely a get-together for students, alumni and faculty, and think more of entertainment than we do of "re-uniting" and recalling the history and traditions of the school. This year the committee sought to solve that situation by calling upon alumni and students to participate actively in the program.

Following a fine six-course dinner, during which an orchestra from the college furnished enjoyable music, the chairs were pushed back and attention was centered upon the stage, where the speakers were assembled. The office of toastmaster was ably and cleverly handled by the Honorable Joseph A. Moynihan. A brief tribute was paid to the memory of friends of the college who had passed on during the last year, by the Honorable John V. Brennan of Recorder's Court.

No college gathering being complete without words from our beloved Dean, William Krichbaum, who was called upon to extend greetings to the assembled guests. Following this, the alumni were represented in the greetings through the reminiscences of Honorable Arthur Kilpatrick.

The main treat of the evening was an address by the Honorable Marcus A. Kavanaugh, Judge of the Superior Court of Cook County, Illinois. Judge Kavanaugh was not new to the Detroit College of Law, having given the commencement address to the class of 1928. His enviable record of service in the administration of criminal law caused his hearers to listen with great respect.

Judge Kavanaugh had arrived in the city early in the morning, had gone on a tour of the city under an honorary police escort, had lunched and conversed with prominent members of the bench and bar, not only of Detroit, but also of the city of Windsor. His address revealed a most accurate knowledge of Michigan law and practice, as well as crime conditions in our city, and we were much pleased to hear him commend our laws as practical and farseeing. Judge Kavanaugh's main plea, in the administration of criminal law, was capital punishment for such criminals as mete that same punishment to those who fall in their path.

At this point the stage was turned over to the Honorable Maurice MacMahon, whose clever comments served to present the various skits and plays which constituted the latter part of the program. A real send-off to the program was the imitation of Judge Brennan rendered by Frederick W. Fox, who, in the words of the Judge, "Sounds more like me than I do myself."

There followed several numbers by the stage band of the Hollywood Theater, provided through the generous permission of the manager. The college was represented in this act by Raymond Meurer. Three one-act plays, "The Music Cure," by George Bernard Shaw, "The Awakening" and "Non Compos Mentis," both by Axel A. Gruenberg, were ably acted and well received. College students who took parts were Gilbert Davis, Dole F. Dohn, John Chamberlain, Elmer Broker, and Smith Ira Champlin, and the direction was by Winniett Wright.

The quartette of the college, making its first appearance a distinct credit, was composed of George Iseley, Perry Fremont, Donald Phillips, and Burns Ridgeway.

After a long and distinctly enjoyable evening, the guests departed, with the feeling that there had been a Reunion in the true sense, where old friendships were renewed and where the entire entertainment was given by students and alumni of the college.

THE J-HOP

ENCHANTING music, subdued lights, merry laughter, dancing feet, attractive decorations, fraternity booths and the spirit of merry-making—this was the setting of the fourth annual party of the Junior Class held within the gorgeously decorated hall of the Fountain Room of the Masonic Temple, Friday evening, May 23.

With the support of the entire school, the Juniors gave a fete that was destined to be long remembered by its guests as one of the most delightful events of the year, thereby attaining the standards set by its precedents.

Once again the members of the bench and bar, faculty, alumni and students gathered to enjoy that annual party to which they all looked forward with great anticipation. Nor were these ardent supporters disappointed, for the untiring efforts of the committees were repaid with pleasing success; every precious moment of this eventful gathering was deeply impressed upon the minds of those present.

The newly decorated and ever-entrancing ballroom was procured through the efforts of Jack Dallar. He is credited with obtaining that able exponent of jazz—Jack McGay and his Book-Cadillac Blue Room Orchestra and those masters of syncopation—the Casa Loma Boys, fresh from their successes in eastern cities.

The favors, which were the cause for comments of admiration and pleasure, were the choice of Ned Smokler and his favor committee. The transformation of the ballroom was due to the artful work of N. Sheldon and his committee.

Three hundred or more couples, dancing to the inspiring tune of that incomparable Jack McGay and his Blue Room Orchestra of radio fame, and to those masters of melody, the Casa Loma Boys, just returned from successes at Princeton, Penn State, University of Pennsylvania, Vanderbilt, and W. and J., showed the committee had accomplished a success it so justly deserved.

At the bewitching hour of twelve, the dancers stopped to take their places for the grand march. The procession, led by Jack Dollar, the chairman of the J-Hop committee, and his charming wife, wound its way along the fraternity booths, along the edge of the fountain, nor did it cease until every fair lady received a trinket of novel beauty and design.

Once again the orchestra struck up a lively number and the marching column broke into a mass of dancing couples, covering the entire floor. And they danced till the wee hours of the morning, when the music and the dancers reluctantly left the floor, abandoning the majestic room in silent beauty—the dance was ended.

To cap an evening so well enjoyed some two hundred couples hurried to the Hotel Tuller, breakfasted and danced until the gray streaks in the east announced the coming of morning—daylight.

The J-Hop was over, but not forgotten as it passed into the annals of History and Romance.

SENIOR BALL

THE SENIOR BALL COMMITTEE
John Pfeifle, Chairman

RIDAY, the thirteenth day of June, 1930, would seem a very undesirable night for the last social function of the class of 1930 to those of a superstitious nature.

To the contrary, the attitude of the Senior class is fatalistic, in that if the "jinx" was to upset them, it would have in those four years of hard work. Soon that unusual date, if you must call it so, the boys and students, too, of whom we have a few, with their rented tuxes, will become very dignified and sedate.

The only restraint will be the presence of those gentlemen who have thrown the fear of "flunk" into us for four long years. Fear not! These gentlemen under that sense of well being, promulgated by gastronomic sufficiency and in a humble attitude, due to the presence of their respective wives, will at last appear in their true light of being only human; long suspected and thus confirmed.

Really that should be entertainment enough in itself, but to further the good reputation created by the chairman of previous class functions, we might have a few acts from a booking or theatrical agency, but that is unlikely due to the presence of our wives, sweethearts or call them what you may. This matter, as with other specific details, has not as yet been settled at the time of this writing, but rest assured that there will be other diversion, besides eating, dancing and watching the faculty eat chicken. (Mr. Danhof insists that it be boneless.)

The season being warm, with that something in the air, which will affect the free and handsome, it is intended to secure some club house, preferably outside the corporate limits. As the class is composed of a large majority of the aforementioned gentlemen, this location would be very desirable, because what would be nicer than a June moon; a sparkling lake and soft, dewy grass, even if it does stain; with dreamy music in the background created by a clever band? Why, even a pessimist would be satisfied. Of course, those who are not affected, or have their wives with them, will have a perfect floor, the best music, congenial company and ideal surroundings.

Up to this point this article has been to create a mental picture in the potential customers, to cause them to realize they must go. But wait, ladies, do not feel slighted. Besides partaking of the unusual circumstances elucidated above, they will be the recipients of, and we hope pleased with, some handy little favor carefully selected by our able favor committee. So girls, put a little pressure on the embryo lawyer and get the occasion to show off that new dress. If you talk him into going, we will do the rest.

After using a certain amount of banter and innuendo, a few words might be said (in a more serious vein) about the personnel of the so-called "Senior Ball Committee." These gentlemen—they are not lawyers yet—are in the present and will up to and including the thirteenth of June, really work to create a very pleasant memory for all those attending.

RIDGEWAY

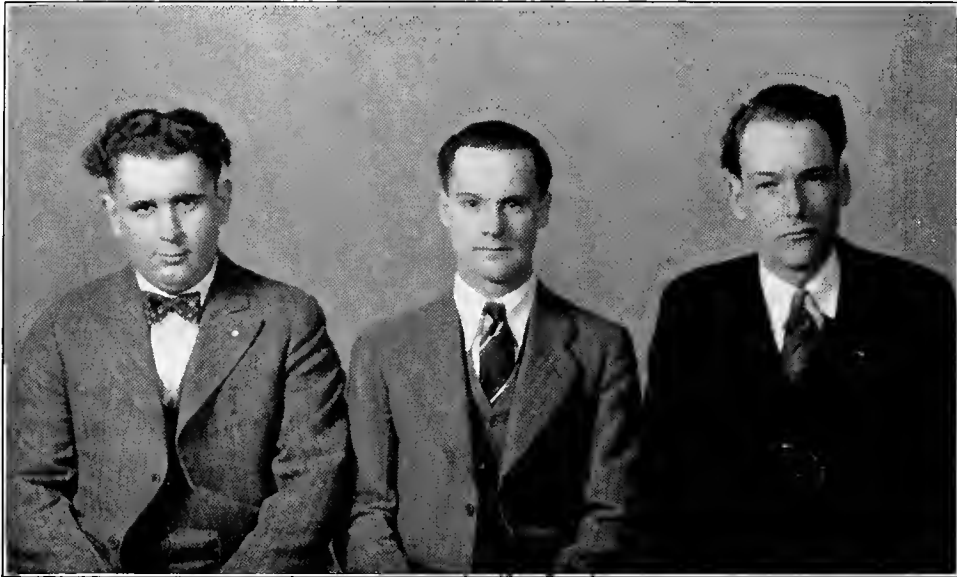

HE D. C. L. quartet was organized in February of 1930 by Donald Phillips. Don felt that the activities of a college such as the D. C. L. would not be complete without a quartette. Therefore he set out with the ambition of a Freshman and a wealth of vocal solo and quartette experience in his favor, to organize a quartette. He finally discovered in T. Burns Ridgeway, Perry Freeman and Geo. G. Isley, sophomores, the talent required to make the quartette a success and with no end of untiring effort and relentless practice produced a D. C. L. male quartet which made its initial appearance in the reunion of 1930. They were enthusiastically received by the student body and alumni.

The quartette wishes to extend its appreciation to the student body, faculty and alumni for their hearty reception of its offerings and hopes to remain a permanent organization in the activities of the college.

Oratory

ORATORICAL ASSOCIATION

President
Secretary
Treasurer

EDGAR A. BEAUCHAMP
DONALD PLANKELL
D. McMANUS

WE readily find in the realm of oratory a sort of valve-acting element which affords to all of us that amiable manner of releasing the steam in our minds and giving vent to our stored up or sometimes suppressed theories and opinions. To appreciate this gentle art, study is an essential ingredient. Many of us lose sight of the value of words by the charm of the voice or magnetism of personality. And if displeased or bored by the lack of either quality they lose vision of the whole endeavor, all of which obviously proves to the learned of the subject the necessity of cautious, careful and strict attention to the psychology needed to succeed in our trials.

To the student of the law, the ancient art of flowing words and graceful gestures should be of untold value. Appreciating the gradual passing-on of the dramatic and bombastic type of court scenes, we still have, nevertheless, the need of training ourselves to magnifying our thoughts to a professional degree by cultivating our voice and poise to fit the changing occasions, and needs. The laity automatically expects this of us and since it comprises a tool of the trade we should all strive to bring out the best that is in us.

Throughout the school year, this association presents several interesting contests. Our first spring contest proved to be extremely interesting to those attending. The contest was won by George Parzens with Charles Menmuir second, and Royal Rood took third honors. The judges were Coach Lockwood and Peter Drexelius.

At this writing we are waiting for the date of April 24th to arrive to stage our annual Lacy, Hickey, and Krichbaum contest, featuring cash prizes amounting to $50.00. The contestants entered so far are: Charles Menmuir, George Parzens, Walton Moore, Israel Cohen, and Royal Rood. The judges so far selected are: Judge John V. Brennan, and Mrs. Osborn, associated with the Board of Education.

THE DEBATING TEAM

THE Detroit College of Law for many years has wholeheartedly supported the various activities in public speaking. The benefits which accrue to the college as well as to the individual are too obvious to bear repetition. Thorough culture in the art of speaking demands experience and the debating team furnishes an opportunity to secure this necessary and valuable training.

This year the team participated in more than twenty debates, meeting most of the important colleges of the state. The subject "Disarmament of Nations" was most timely and offered opportunity for the debaters to present convincing arguments; both pro and con.

Noticeable among the students of the colleges visited, was a desire for information regarding the advantages of studying Law in Detroit. In fact there are many in our own student body who were former opponents of the Detroit College of Law debating team. We take occasion to compliment Coach Charles C. Lockwood on the success of the organization this year. His untiring efforts have been largely responsible for the results attained, and we hope he will continue to be with us next season.

The members of this year's debating team were Marvin W. Ransom, Bernard Cruse, A. V. McRee, R. M. Lockwood, Ralph Keys, Donald Phillips, Donald Plankel, Royal Rood, Clifton Hill, Lowell Stellberger, D. E. Holbrook and Weston Sheldon.

It is to be regretted that a larger number of the student body do not participate in the activities of the debating team, both in attending the debates and participating therein. This organization certainly deserves the wholehearted support of the Student Body.

THE DECOLAW CLUB

President OTTO SCHULTZ
Vice-President WILLIAM C. KREUGER
Secretary and Treasurer IRVING ACKERMAN

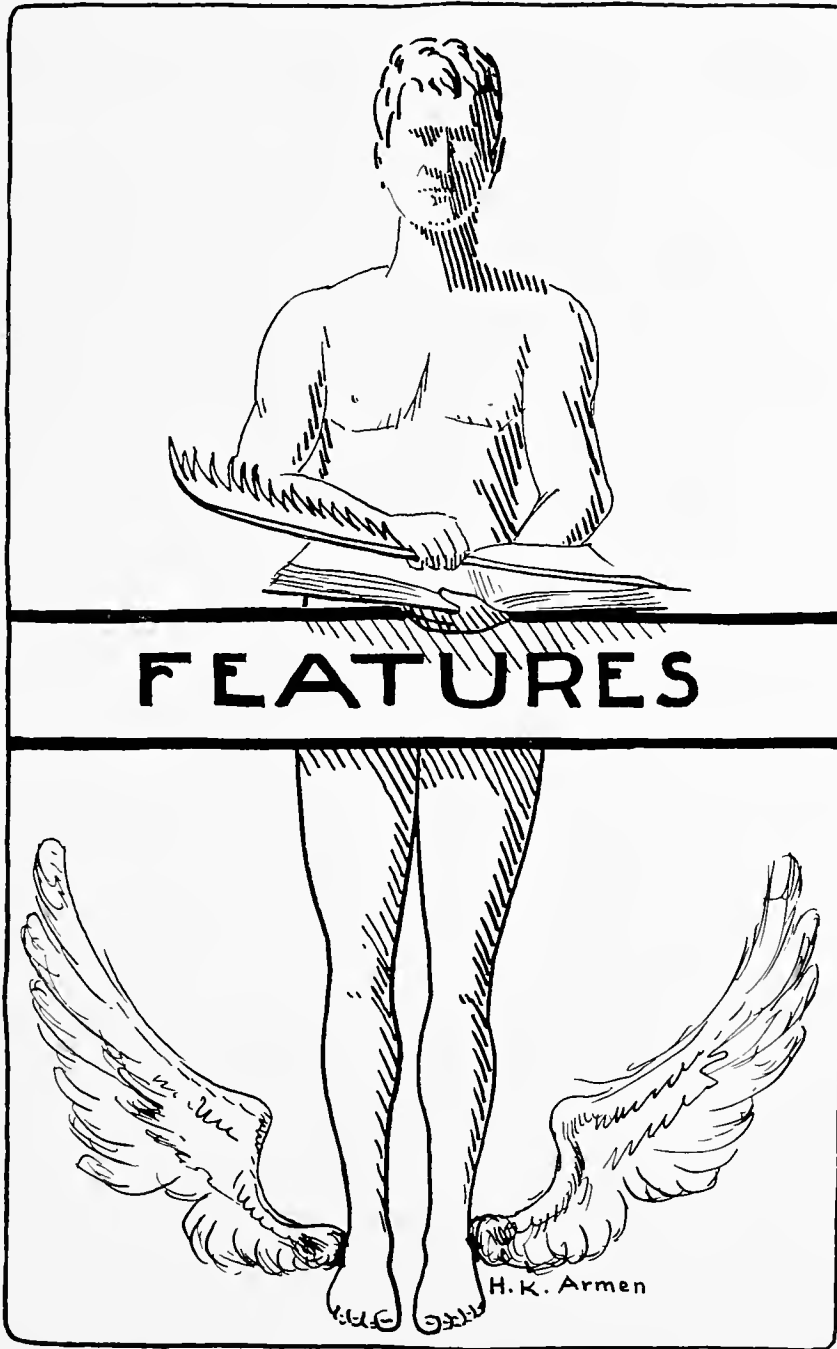

The Decolaw Club was organized in October, 1927, by twelve members of the Class of 1931. Its prime objective is the development of public speaking ability among its members, although it also aims to maintain a spirit of good fellowship throughout the class. To attain these ends each meeting of the club is given over to some phase of forensic activity, such as debating, oratory, mock trials, or discussions, in which the various members participate.

At present, meetings are held each Friday evening of the school year in the Court Room, and a cordial invitation to attend is extended to all members of the student body.

On the evening of March 13, 1930, the first oratorical contest of the current year was held in the first year men's assembly room of the college, before one of the largest audiences in the history of this activity. R. Fitzgerald, of the association, presided, and Mr. Charles Lockwood and Mr. Peter Drexelius acted as judges.

First prize was awarded by the judges to Mr. George Parzin, '30, who delivered an address entitled "Intolerance." Mr. C. H. Menmuir, '30, was given second place for his oration, "The Handwriting on the Wall." To Mr. Royal D. Rood went third honor for his speech, "A Plea for Equal Rights."

Gold medals bearing the insignia of the college were given to the winners.

THE UNWHIPPED

*We are the ones to watch some day,
When the shotedown comes at last;
We who have known the harder way
That led through a rougher past;
We who have trained upon defeat,
Battered and beaten back,
As long as the heart is there to meet
The call for a new attack.*

*We've battled the head winds, fight by fight,
In an endless jam with Fate;
We've floundered on through the pit of night
Where the black gales howled their hate;
We've taken our beating standing up,
And now with the calling drums
We lift our heads, with another cup
To the next hard scrap that comes.*

*Rare luck has lashed our softer roles
To a new red-heart romance;
It has burned the fat from around our souls
And given red blood its chance;
And when at last the tide has turned,
With blood-stained flags unfurled
We'll cut our way to the place we've earned
Where the unwhipped rule the world.

THE LAW IN BUSINESS

By HERBERT H. GARDNER, '16

Executive Vice-President Highland Park Trust Co.

The student-body of our law schools has increased apace during the last decade. The Commencement Day Exercise witnesses the departure of thousands of young men and women from the class room, their places to be taken shortly by other and increasing numbers. In an already crowded profession, where is there room for all of them? This is no new query, but has been put many times through many years. It is obvious that the profession itself does not and could not absorb them. It is equally apparent that a large proportion of enrolled students have no thought of ever applying themselves to the practice of law. A check of students in any school of law will reveal numerous instances of men and women who have engaged in some line of business and then given up their occupation to study law. In the Evening Schools are many who are engaged in various business pursuits during the day, with their free hours given up to the acquiring of further educational equipment through the study of law.

Our mercantile, industrial and financial organizations have as employees and officials an ever-increasing number of persons who are educated in greater or lesser degree in the law and such are apt to be found in the places of larger responsibility. The Law School has become a place of preparation for a business career and as such its contribution to business is as great as to the legal profession.

The man or woman who is well-grounded in the fundamentals of the law or who has perhaps addressed himself or herself to some specialized subjects peculiarly adapted to the solution of particular business problems is regarded as a distinctly valuable addition to the staff of business organizations in many and varied lines of activity. The reason is easy to determine. Organized business is no longer operated along haphazard lines. Facts, as they apply to the particular business at hand, are essential to the formulation of intelligent decision. Who is better trained than the lawyer to search out and classify facts? Policies are based on principles developed through years of experience. In the application of such principles to established facts, who is better qualified than the able lawyer? When business was a matter of opportunism, of seizing the advantage as it appeared at the moment, there was more of craft than of intelligence required. With the newer order of things many branches of business have virtually taken on the aspects of the professions. In such undertakings the lawyer naturally fits, for he represents the traditions and dignity of an ancient and honorable profession. He knows that the great body of our law which knits together the social structure was not conceived or developed in a day, but is the work of centuries and the product of the best minds of those centuries. In the field of business he knows that enduring growth and prosperity must be built upon clear conceptions, sound policies and intelligent administration. Such are consistent with the traditions he has been taught to respect. High executive position in business is no longer a place for the amateur, nor in this day of super-organization does the uneducated, untrained man face as easy a prospect of vaulting into the position of authority and affluence as in an earlier day. Business is involved, but its complications are not beyond the powers of solution of the individual who has successfully mastered the intricacies and sometimes obscurities of the law. Business is enmeshed at every hand in legal requirement and technicalities. Happy the management that has at its disposal one to whom the mazes are familiar ground.

The problems of modern business call for the law-trained man, but let him look well to the sufficiency of his training and equipment, for it is still true that "a little knowledge is a dangerous thing." And let him remember, too, that he is not a legal practitioner. There is a line of demarkation between the lawyer in business and his brother of the bar which should and must be observed, and this is true whether the need of the moment is for the ounce of prevention or the pound of cure. To this end let the lawyer in business continue to look to counsel for the advice and assistance necessary to supplement his own experience and judgment. And so they pass out of the doors of our law schools, some to assist in marshalling and directing the forces of business and some to assume the responsibility of adjusting, compromising and settling the differences arising from the clash of interests of those forces.

AERONAUTICS AND LAW

By LAWRENCE M. KELLY,* Feb., '31

What goes up must come down! With the number of aeroplanes that we have flying around today it is reasonable to expect that some of them will come down as and when they shouldn't. It is also reasonable to expect that in such a descent something or someone will be damaged or hurt, and, because people are still sensitive, actions at law will arise therefrom; someone too non-progressive to take a joke will believe that his rights have been invaded. Flying has been going on for twenty years and we have heard of no fledgling lawyer who has yet developed wings and soared to heights of eminence in aeronautical law. Whoever heard of a new line of endeavor succeeding and remaining successful without enriching a suitable number of the legal profession? Any business that develops a wide utility must of necessity develop a wide field of opportunity for adroit young attorneys. Aeroplane flight of all kinds, and especially aeroplane transportation, provides possibilities. Perhaps the legal profession has not been attracted to this broad field because of incidents such as the following:

Facts: (This is an English case):

A young pilot in a hedge-hopping mood flew low over a railroad station, and saw on the platform three pretty dresses. His quick glance registered amorous possibilities. He circled around again over the station platform at a lower altitude. Approaching the spot of his newly found interest he began to wave vigorously to attract the attention of the femmes wearing said dresses. He failed to see a tree, a disconcerting and humiliating mistake. The result was an interruption to the flight, the flirtation and his fancy. The aeroplane stopped abruptly after swirling off to the kitchen roof of a neighboring house. The pilot also stopped (though undamaged and unchanged except in poise, interest and attention). The engine went through the roof into the kitchen.

Now the legal questions arising out of just such situations as this have dampened the ardor of the legal profession in making the hazards and blunders of flight the object of their ambitions and field of endeavor.

Question:

Who is to be sued? Are the girls with the pretty dresses to be sued for distracting the concentrated thought and attention of a very promising, though indiscreet young airman? Or, is the owner of the tree to be sued for impeding and obstructing the progress of an instrument of a new science? Or, is the owner of the house to be sued because his building abruptly stopped the whole business? Or, is the seller of the aeroplane, who sold under title retaining contract and to whom the aeroplane belonged subject to the pilot's rights under the contract, which rights immediately became non-existent when the young pilot lost control, to be sued for putting so fickle an instrument in the hands of so young a man inclined to reckless abandon and daring flirtations?

Answer:

(In the words of Raymond E. VanSyckle): "It all depends." The girls were the proximate cause; the tree was the instrument of obstruction; the house was the instrument of destruction. You can't prosecute the girls as they had disappeared with three young soldiers. You can't get damages from the owner of the tree as his tree had been standing there for about forty years. It would be hard to get damages from the owner of the house as it couldn't fold up and act as a shock absorber. It had been built long before the real estate boom. It must be that if you are going to sue anyone, with the hope of getting anything, you must sue the vendor under the title retaining contract. We have not included the possibility of suit against the pilot—he is destitute of money, aeroplane and confidence. (This reasoning will show you what a valuable thing a law course has been to the writer.)

Encouraged by that one we will "propone" another:

We will take the case of The Something and Something Telephone Company vs. Goose Creek Flying School.

* Former chief testing pilot of the British Royal Flying Corps, with eighteen months' active flying on the Western Front. Mr. Kelly presents some unusual legal questions in this interesting article.

Facts:

Goose Creek Flying School (Will teach you to fly in two hours—Pilot's license in six—$100.00 per hour. Perfect flyer in less than a week. Approved by Someone. See ad in "Brief Case") is situated in a stubbly field located at the junction of two busy highways. "B," a student, has completed ground work and dual instruction and is ready for a solo flight. He has the aeroplane in the middle of the field facing up-wind. With a last safe, prolonged, and wistful look at the ground he "gives it the gun" (very technical expression meaning open the throttle; all lawyers should know these scientific, aeronautical terms). The plane starts off across the ground. He manages to get the tail up enough so that the plane will run. It takes off, the power of the engine in this case making the take-off, not the pilot. After rising about twenty feet in the air, said pilot, his mind frozen in the icy grip of fear and his muscles bound in an enthralling dismay, gets the machine in a steep bank turn and proceeds to do a "Ruggles," reversing his field. Without knowledge of where the goal is, and with less knowledge and total disregard for the sidelines, he plunges in the reverse direction, imperiling the life of one of Goose Creek's intrepid, heroic, war veteran instructors (see advertisements) (said instructor received ground school training during the war at Army's Primary Ground School and learned to fly, after being canned as unfit from said Army School, in a second hand, barn-storming plane owned by an old time saloon keeper of progressive mind who saw the possibilities of aeroplanes at the inception of the 18th Amendment). As I said, the said student, "B," imperiled this worthy hero's life and the life of his latest pupil as they were coming down and about to land. They didn't crash, why is unexplainable, but it was so close that said pupil lost all desire to continue in the instruction and said instructor was so annoyed that he said things worthy of record in the annals of aeronautics. "B" proceeded across the field, or rather we should say the aeroplane containing "B" proceeded across the field, as it was flying "B"—"B" not flying it. In crossing the road, busy with Sunday traffic, the tailskid of the plane caught on the telephone wire. He didn't crash! The Guardian Angel that watches over babes, drunken men, fools, and married women, together with the power of the engine still pulled the crate along. By some fortuitous circumstance the plane turned and proceeded back to the air-drome, and whether aided by said student or not, it lost its gliding grace and planked down on the ground with a wham. As the age of miracles is not past, neither "B" nor the plane was damaged. He had taken off by the power of the engine, and had flown by the power of the principalities of the air, and had landed by the grace of God. When he was able to hear, for the noise of the engine had deafened him, and was able to shut his mouth, for fear had opened it and kept it open during the whole procedure, he was soundly clapped on the back by the owner and optimistic proprietor of the said Goose Creek Flying School. He was told and enthusiastically assured that from henceforth and forevermore he was to be known as one of America's great flying men, and after one more flight like that he would be entitled to a license to fly any kind of a machine, in any kind of weather, anywhere, with any load, passengers, freight, or both, and that he was sure to get his name in the headlines of the paper when he crashed and killed himself (the more passengers he should be carrying at the time of such crash, the greater his newspaper column space). The possibilities were all to be available on the payment of his final $100.00 and the cost of the repair to the tailskid.

Now the Telephone Company wants its money for the repair of the telephone wires. This is where the attorney comes in, that is, on the side of the telephone company.

Question:

How can you collect any money from the Goose Creek Flying School?

Answer:

Get a big bag of salt and a butterfly net—crawl stealthily toward the flock of planes and pilots in front of the hangar and—well anyhow it is commonly believed that a law student immediately upon graduation is of inestimable value to any business so you may start a flying school for yourself.

No doubt there are many law students and possibly a few attorneys who would feel perfectly at home in aeronautical law. Their minds have been for a long time in as great a whirl with as much rattle and whirl as any propeller. In thought of themselves they have soared to greater heights than any aeroplane will ever attain.

Figure it out for yourself. Warm air goes up. An aeroplane flies because its hurried forward motion through the air forms a vacuum on top of the wings which lifts it up. How many young attorneys we see rush from law school expecting to boost themselves by hot air and who too are so firmly and securely held in a vacuum while slithering about at great speed trying to impress their public by their great though misapplied industry and self-inflation!

Well, as I said in the beginning—What goes up must come down, therefore, control yourself!

INDICTMENT

CIRCUMSCRIBED by Ancient Laws, regulated by a myriad of uncertain legislative acts, and reluctant ever to cast aside the death grip of doubtful precedent and unsubstantial technicalities, the legal profession has been unable to speed up the administration of justice to keep pace with modern business.

As a result of this conspicuous failure to secure expedition and thoroughness in the enforcement of public and private rights, business has in some cases been forced to establish arbitration boards and bureaus to secure that which the constitution says the courts shall give.

The demand for simplicity in procedure does not spring only from ignorant and radical reformers or iconoclasts but is a step in the advance of progressive jurisprudence, for it is historically proven that extreme technicality is the sign of an undeveloped system of law, in which legal rights are subordinate to the procedure to enforce them, wherein the substance is secondary to the form.

Is our legal system too slow for this machine age?

CLARENCE R. MARTIN.

FROM THE WILL OF STEPHEN GIRARD

SECONDLY, I enjoin and require that no ecclesiastic, missionary or minister of any sect whatsoever, shall ever hold or exercise any station or duty whatsoever in the said college; nor shall any such person ever be admitted for any purpose, or as a visitor, within the premises appropriated to the purposes of the said college.

In making this restriction, I do not mean to cast any reflection upon any sect or person whatsoever; but as there is such a multitude of sects, and such a diversity of opinion amongst them, I desire to keep the tender minds of the orphans, who are to derive advantage from this bequest, free from the excitement which clashing doctrines and sectarian controversy are so apt to produce; my desire is, that all the instructors and teachers in the college shall take pains to instill into the minds of the scholars, the purest principles of morality, so that, on their entrance into active life, they may, from inclination and habit, evince benevolence toward their fellow creatures, and a love of truth, sobriety and industry, adopting at the same time, such religious tenets as their matured reason may enable them to prefer.

Note: The heirs tried to break this will with Daniel Webster's assistance. Their contention was founded largely upon this paragraph. Nevertheless, the will prevailed before the Supreme Court of the United States.

'S A TOUGH RACKET

WITH a determined frown Jimmy attempted to quell the song of spring that welled in his heart. For he had resolved to make up some briefs, and when one is so engaged, he can not have songs of spring welling in his heart, or anything else.

Selecting one of five reports, miraculously smuggled from the library, he settled to his task. Scarcely had the first page been read for the third time when the 'phone rang. Fifteen minutes later Jimmy returned, having firmly but sweetly impressed on one precious mind that occasionally a student must be studious.

Five pages later the doorbell temporarily dispelled musings on Cooley's not too laconic wisdom. A half hour was consumed in explaining that, while one might be interested in helping fellow students through college, and, incidentally, acquiring three publications that could not fail to improve the mind, still there are pecuniary limitations.

This recess necessitated a review of the case. Shortly a pleasant masculine voice was heard upstairs.

"This is the Askin Blue Handled Axe Hour, broadcast through the courtesy of DCL from the Collegiate Building on the campus.

"Ask for Askin's Blue Handled Axes. The axe with the handle just a little bluer, and the blade just a little truer.

"Our first selection will be the Lumber Jack Quartet singing that plaintive melody, 'They Cut Down the Old Pine Tree,' by request."

Remembering that success spurns those who swerve from a purpose, our hero attained the acme of concentration on the next ten pages. Then his sister, coming in early, was somewhat disturbed by his manner as he rushed out to shoot pool with the boys on the corner, and particularly disturbed by the language he used in reference to the dissenting opinion he had read.

W. K. YEARSLEY.

A PARABLE IN SELF-DEFENSE

At the conclusion of a banquet given in his honor on the occasion of a recent visit to Poland, Gilbert K. Chesterton was called upon for a speech.

"An early Christian martyr," said Chesterton, "stood in the arena awaiting the lions, and he prayed to his God to perform a miracle that would save his life. And God gave him a divine inspiration.

"The grating in front of the lions' den was raised and a great tawny beast appeared, sniffed the air, shook his mane, roared and bounded toward the awaiting martyr. The Christian stood with folded arms and when the animal drew near was heard to mutter a few words. Immediately the lion recoiled and slunk back to the far end of the arena where he tranquilly lay down.

"Nero gave a brief order and the Christian was dragged in front of the imperial lodge.

"'What didst thou say?' asked the emperor. 'What magic hast thou used that the king of beasts hath refused to harm thee?'

"'O Caesar,' replied the Christian, 'I said simply to the lion: 'Have a care what thou doest, fool, for after thou hast eaten they will call upon thee to make a speech.'"

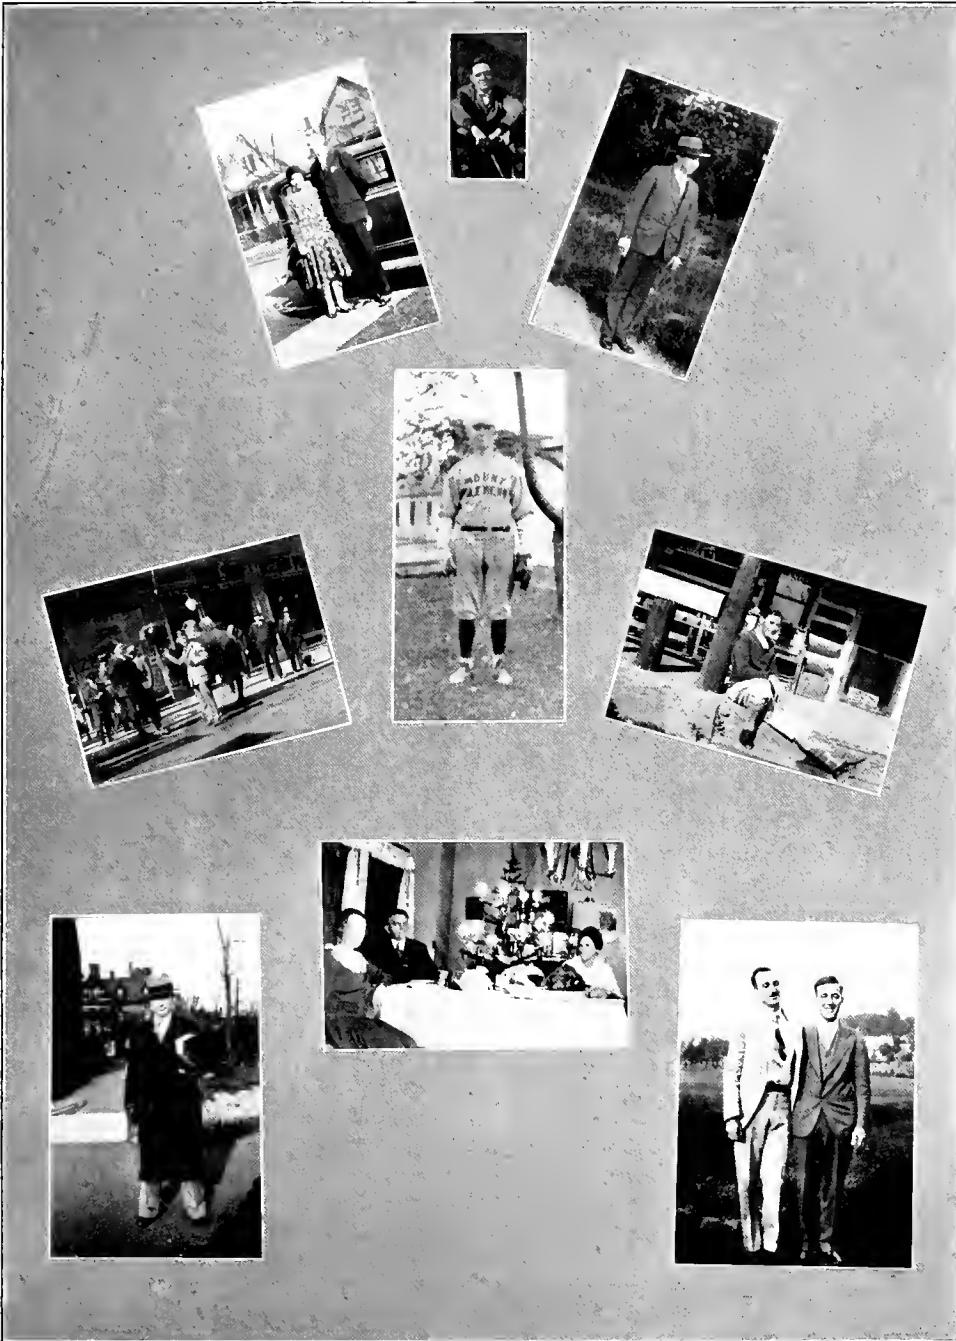

Whereupon G. K. C., without another word, resumed his seat.

THE HAUNTED LIBRARY

Of making many laws, I said, there is no end. The road a prospective lawyer travels is hazardous, and in future, he will be unable to reverse judgments if he fails to appropriate now a goodly stock of legal wise saws and instances.

With this ambitious thought uppermost in my mind I entered the library.

It was morning. The drab backs of legal volumes slumbered on the shelves. There was something impressive in the melancholy silence of the library which made me—an otherwise indifferent fellow—to tread cautiously.

Soon I was in the technical labyrinth of a reported case. I did not like it. Justice is not simple. She follows a breathless course; that is the reason they bandaged her eyes. I continued to meditate as I began to copy the head-notes.

A slight noise rippled in the heavy silence. It was like the shuffling of a gown. I raised my eyes. I still wonder why the sight did not strike me blind.

One of the volumes had grown to gigantic proportions and from between its pages there stepped down a human form enfolded in inky cloak, not unlike the black robe of a judge.

The form moved and took a step toward me!

Seized with mortal terror and under the violent lashing of contrary emotions, words, long forgotten, leaped to my lips:

"Avant! and quit my sight, let the earth hide thee,
Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold,
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou glare with."

What followed it is not in human power to describe adequately.

A salvo of tumultuous applause greeted my convulsive words, and the figure, now close to me, said in sepulchral voice:

"Well said, with good elocution and feeling."

Slipping into a state of semi-consciousness, I looked around like a hounded animal eager to find out the source of the rumbling applause. There, from the grotesquely enlarged legal tomes came forth a legion of judicial ghosts.

They were too real to be mistaken for spectres. They seemed to be advancing and maneuvering in endless battalions. Instinctively I looked toward the shelf where Michigan Statutes were. The bulky volumes had assumed the proportions of ramparts and gave out their quota of judge-ghosts.

I took refuge behind one of them.

What used to be the library of Detroit College of Law now appeared to me a vast landscape teeming with humanity. Perhaps it was the grayish mist that made the ghosts appear in perspective and create the illusion of distance.

To my shame I must confess that my timidity borders on cowardice and now, in the clutch of circumstances that no mortal ever suffered, my thoughts centered on escape. The primeval urge for self-preservation surged within me with all its savage insistence. I turned toward the door. A bailiff, ominous and fearful, guarded it and blocked my way.

I looked for a friend and among the Michigan ghosts a face struck me as familiar. Yes, I knew the features, the shaven upper lip and untrimmed beard. It was the face of one of the Smith Brothers of Cough Drop fame.

"Mr Smith," I queried eagerly, "are we in danger?"

A glowering glance answered me.

"Mr. Smith?"

"Yes, Sir. Are you not one of the Smith Brothers?"

"Smith! Smith Brothers! My name is Thomas Cooley . . ."

Ah, the deceptive treachery of superficial resemblance! To take the great Justice Cooley for the controller of coughs.

Remorse burned my forehead. Why, why did I take up law? I should have followed my original inclination and become a porter. Even now, above the dim and dust of this ghastly scene, I saw the dark green uniform and the shining brass buttons of a princely porter.

I turned toward where the windows used to be. In the distance, across the way, was a mob of aborigines. Their bodies covered with skins, each armed with a spear, they were so like the barbarians of Hannibal deployed upon an African flatland ready to attack. They kept up an incessant drumming on two huge tom-toms.

This new danger overshadowed the rest.

Tugging at the black robe of a judge, I whispered in great trepidation:

"Sire, your gracious Honor, will they not massacre us now?"

"No!" and a sarcastic grimace, which I took for a smile, played around his ghostly mouth. "They are lawyers, beating their imbecile tom-toms. Can you read the inscriptions on those hideous things?"

Indeed upon the drawn skin of the tom-toms large letters were discernible. I read them: "PRESUMPTIONS," and on the other "OBJECTIONS."

A sinking sensation flooded me, alleviating the horror of my situation, and I began to watch the Plutonian panorama with quiet unconcern.

"You reversed my decisions, didn't you?" a ghost at my side sneered at the figure whom I had questioned regarding Hannibal's barbarians. "Chief Justice, bah!"

"Well, Jim," the Supreme Court Justice spoke calmly, "you were not a bright bird. One of the inexplicable accidents of politics made you judge. I knew you when you were a student at Detroit College of Law."

"Shut up, you inveterate zero-slinger."

At a distant corner were grouped the English jurists in their sumptuous trappings. They scanned the field with cold reserve.

They attracted my attention because a belligerent ghost, an American one, was shaking both his fists at the Britishers and shouting furiously:

"Down with your precedents. You have perpetrated enough evil upon American jurisprudence. You have fostered confusion. I say, down with you all. You, You, Lord Nottingham, hay the imps of hell shake your bones to perdition. You and your Statute of Frauds. It engendered more frauds than poor mortals could think of. Take away your accursed traditions and doctrines, we want to develop an American body of laws. Down with you . . ."

He turned and faced the American ghosts, fire in his eyes and thunder in his voice he belched forth:

"Brothers, when is it that in search of a rule for our conduct, we shall no longer be bandied from Coke to Croke, from Planden to Year Books, from thence to the dome books, from ignotium to ignotius in the inverse ratio of philosophy and reason?"⁽¹⁾

The disastrous climax, was at hand when the Britishers and Americans would launch the death struggle.

A gong sounded. It was the bailiiff giving the alarm.

All vanished.

Footsteps were heard from outside. The door of the library opened with a flourish and a classmate entered.

"Hello, Shorty, all alone?"

"Yeah, all alone!"

Never again went I into the library in the mornings.

THE LAW STUDENT

TO PROF. RAYMOND E. VAN SYCKLE

The law student is a mysterious and sinister by-product of the human race. His beginnings and development are shrouded in abysmal darkness and the immutable laws of Nature have very little to do in explaining his existence.

The consensus of scientific opinion is that this creature is one of the freak accidents of the Universe which the Everlasting Architect occasionally tolerates in order to bring out the beauty of the rest of His handiwork. A screeching discord which, by its contrast, heightens the singing melody.

It is a conservative statement to assert that in the original scheme of Creation the law student was not included.

Though we are in the dark as to his beginnings, yet we are reasonably sure that his history is not old. In looking over the list of animals which entered into Noah's Ark, we find no mention of the law student. Therefore his appearance on the face of the earth may safely be presumed to have occurred between the Deluge and that memorable year when a flock of wild geese, by their excited cackling, saved the Capitol of Rome.

There are those who claim that the law student descended directly from these wild geese, but conscientious geologists have vehemently rejected this theory as being grossly uncomplimentary to the geese.

"It is of little importance to know how he came to be. The gruesome fact is that we have this affliction on us."

This very wise conclusion of a great thinker is now universally shared, especially by professors in law colleges.

Contrary to prevailing notions among the laymen, the law student is a human being in appearance at least.

The only solitary knowledge which holds his cranium in absolute fee simple is that he knows everything. This being so the law student naturally considers himself the living boundary of everything in existence, and that which he does not know does not and cannot exist, including the law.

His refusal to learn the laws and legal principles is based on sound logic. It is the claim of the law student that he was made for the laws and not the laws for him; consequently if any learning is to be done, it is the laws that should study him. Unfortunately the law has made little or no headway in acquiring any knowledge of its great challengers.

The law student is a past master of circumlocution, and the proud possessor of an uncanny talent whereby he coins the most bewildering of alibis. In fact, he considers alibis as the fifth element and, on certain occasions, more vital to his life than the old-fashioned four.

Among his dislikes the chief is his own handwriting. That is the reason he stutters and makes faces when reading his brief in class recitation.

Little is known of his artistic preferences except that he abhors the blue color.

Finally, the law student lives longer than any breathing creature on this planet. It is a rare privilege granted to him by Death itself, in gratitude of the law student's services whereby he sends his instructors to an untimely grave with more celerity and dispatch than all the diseases combined.

ON UNEMPLOYMENT

"I do not charge you men with being inhuman. I charge you men with being careless, with being thoughtless of the results of your failure to solve this problem, and I have a right to charge it, because ten years ago I had the honor of being your Mayor when 150,000 men were laid off in a day by a snap of a finger at the command of industry and we, your city servants, were left to grapple with the situation; we were left to find a way to buy shoes and milk tickets, pay rent, and send children to school.

"You passed it off like the water on a duck's back. Government came to the relief. But you paid for it, however. You paid for it. You paid for it through the nose, through taxation, and you will continue to pay for it; believe me, you will pay for it, and you will pay for it in the most expensive way; you will pay for it through government, which is the most expensive way.

"You can prevent high taxes; you can prevent bureaucrats from interfering with the progress and the development of business; you can prevent officials from sending out forms by the bushel for you to fill out and return, if you will solve these problems for yourselves. Government does not interfere with business until business itself has created the necessity."

SENATOR COUZENS.

Justice is as strictly due between neighbor nations as between neighbor citizens. A highwayman is as much a robber when he plunders in a gang, as when single; and a nation that makes an unjust war is only a great gang.

FRANKLIN.

The lawyer who uses his knowledge to stir up strife among the industrious and impede the path of commerce, that he himself may thrive, is unworthy of our respect.

W. H. SEWARD.

The true end of education is to unfold and direct aright our whole nature. Its office is to call forth power of every kind—power of thought, affection, will, and outward action; power to observe, to reason, to judge, to contrive; power to adopt good ends firmly, and to pursue them efficiently; power to gain and to spread happiness.

DELTA THETA PHI

COOLEY SENATE

In the month of June, nineteen hundred and thirty A. D., Cooley Senate celebrates the twenty-seventh year of its existence. The character members of this senate may well be pleased with their brain-child long since grown into maturity.

Let us turn back a quarter of a century to the year nineteen hundred and three. Gathered in the halls of the old school were several young students anxiously awaiting word from the National Fraternity Headquarters. At last they came! Art Kilpatrick spoke the magic words to Harry Dingeman, Pliny Marsh, Ed. Command, and Eugene O'Brien that their chapter had been accepted in this Fraternity.

Thus it came about in this way that our senate was founded. The fraternal spirit of these Honorable men mentioned above has guided us and has furnished us the inspiration through these years of hardships and successes. It is indeed fitting, then, that we present to them a healthy senate which has just passed through its greatest year of attainment.

Upon this page a few of our activities should be recorded. Socially, a Hallowe'en party on a farm in a suburb of Detroit was found to be of novel attraction and a house party at the Fraternity House at 138 Pallister Ave. was splendidly attended. But the most extensive gesture of the year was the annual Christmas Ball at the Book-Cadillac. This was sponsored by the three senates of Detroit which lent gaiety and the spirit of youth to the occasion tempered by the presence of our elder brethren.

In school activities, a goodly number of the leaders were chosen from our ranks. Brothers Watson, Stevens, Beauchamp, W. Wright and Jacques being held in high esteem.

A new policy of drilling candidates has been followed so our youngest members come to us trained in our history and tradition.

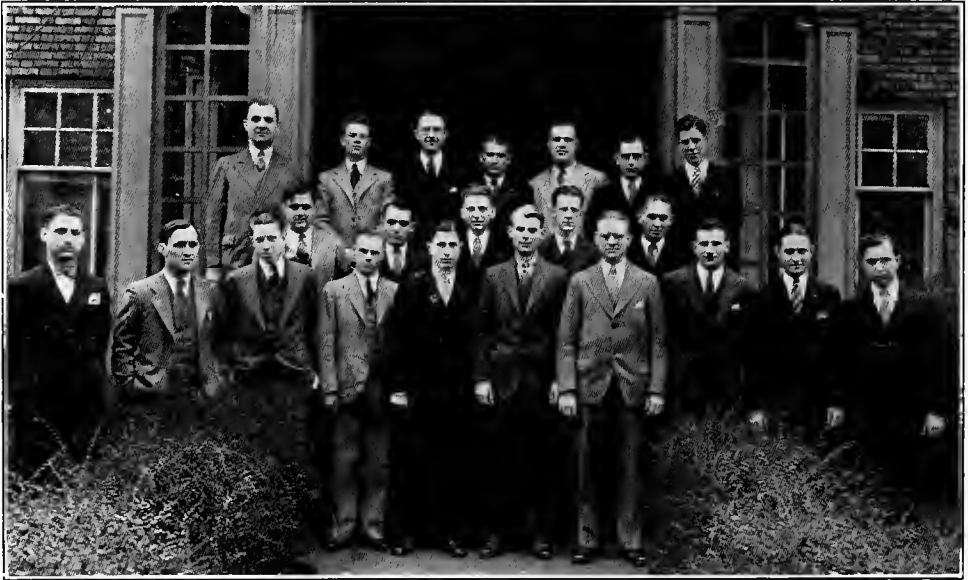

A law library has been installed by this senate for the access of the brethren who have need for the Michigan Reports.

Prospects are bright for the oncoming year. It seems to be the ambition of every class to make the subsequent year one of greater effort. As long as this procedure continues, the perpetuation of the fraternity in this school will be assured and the prestige of the organization will rise to still greater heights.

During the past year Sigma Nu Phi has been able to maintain that enviable position which it has acquired, through the earnest cooperation of its members. Many new members have been added to our ranks. We hope that they will be able to enjoy the privileges that we offer. Social activities have been very fervent. The retiring officers have labored zealously to uphold those principles for which we stand. The officers for 1929 were: Chancellor, Ralph B. Guy; First Vice Chancellor, C. Willard Gitzen; Second Vice Chancellor, George H. Wilson; Master of the Rolls, G. Cameron Buchanan; Registrar of the Exchequer, Lawrence H. Hoefer; Marshall, Charles Deeg.

Our Chapter expects to be the host of the High Court of Chancery to be held in Detroit in 1931.

It is with deep regret that we record the passing of the Honorable William Howard Taft, the twenty-seventh President of the United States and former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, which occurred at his home in Washington, D. C., on March 8, 1930. Our chapter, which was founded in 1915, was named in his honor and with his permission. We have always felt greatly honored to have had so great a citizen as our first honorary member. His life and achievements are matters of such common knowledge that they need no eulogy. May each member strive to perpetuate those ideals that he has established.

ALPHA THETA KAPPA

June, 1930, and the conclusion of the most successful year in the history of Alpha Theta Kappa. Under the able leadership of Chancellor Benjamin Kurtzman, we have made great strides toward the goal of offering to the brothers the social and scholastic opportunities that make college worth-while.

The crowning achievement of the year and of the history of the fraternity is the acquisition of a splendid fraternity home—and 664 Putnam Avenue has been the scene of many a joyous get-together; a home for our out-of-town brothers, and a house of good-fellowship for all the brothers.

Life at law school is dull at best, but our aim in furnishing an outlet for the social activities of the brothers has done a great deal to remedy this. Our Midwinter Prom at the Lee Plaza, winding up with breakfast at the Oriole Terrace, will long be remembered as one of the most enjoyable affairs ever held, and set a high record for our annual Spring Formal, in prospect at this writing. One of the high-lights of our fraternity year is the Farce given by the pledges each semester for the benefit of the active brothers. Among our other activities are monthly luncheons, which have been addressed by alumni and by men prominent in their profession. Among those who addressed us in the past year were Herman A. August, who delivered a very interesting lecture on Probate procedure, and Dr. Harry August, who gave a wonderful talk on Psychiatry as related to Juvenile Delinquency.

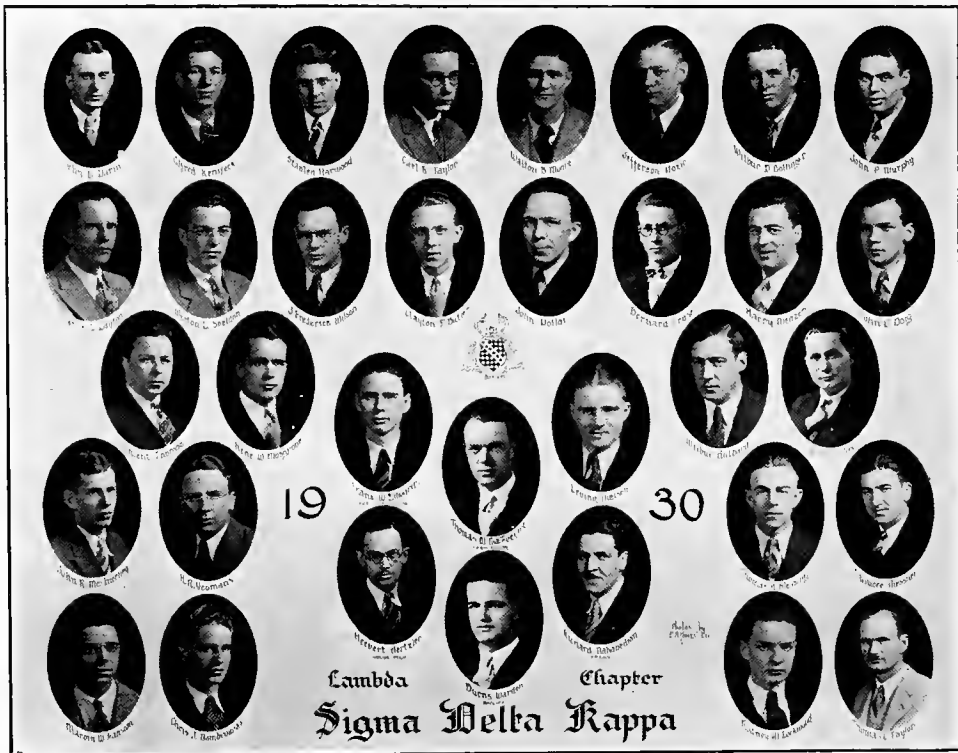

The social activities of the fraternity have not hindered our scholastic aims, and there has been unusual competition among the brothers to win the Simon Stier Scholarship Key. As the winner must maintain an average of 85% or better during the last two years at the college, it is evident that that scholarship is more than of secondary importance to the fraternity.

The unfortunate part of college life is losing brothers by graduation. Our lone graduate of the January, 1930, class at Detroit College of Law was Harry Dworin. The following large number will be graduated in June, 1930, from the Detroit College of Law and the Detroit City Law School: Howard Berger, Samuel Binkow, Robert Danto, Leo Kolodin, Benjamin Kurtzman, Arthur M. Lang, Sol Marks, James S. Nonen, George Parzen, Maurice Robbins, Ben C. Shapero, Harry Thurswell, Jack M. Wise, Earl Victorson.

Again the close of the school term has wound its way, and Lambda Chapter looks with pride to the accomplishments of the past year. Though we have lost by graduation many of the active members, we have kept the ball rolling until the chapter is now numerically strengthened to perform the vast tasks that face us this year. Our worthy brother, Jack Rourk, was lost to the active chapter in February, but the fraternity has retained him by electing him to the post of Grand Vice-President. In June, Rene W. Mosgrove, John P. Murphy, Jr., John R. McInerney, Wilbur D. Bollinger and Jefferson Hoxie passed into the ranks of our alumni. Again the fraternity called on Lambda Chapter for an important office. Brother Hoxie was made Grand Associate Justice. Success is our well-wish to the retiring brothers.

The fraternity house has played a large part in our social activities. In our new location we have held many an interesting and enjoyable gathering and many more are planned for the coming year. Lambda has a house of which it may feel proud.

Under the very able guidance of Chancellor MacTaggart the chapter is assured of a very successful year. Ambitious plans are in making and to top it all the next convention of Sigma Delta Kappa will be held in Detroit next December 29, 30 and 31. A New Year's party will be the fitting conclusion to this great event.

The esteem which the students of the Detroit College of Law hold for our members was attested by the election of Walton B. Moore as president of the Junior Class and the unanimous choice of Jack Dollar for chairman of the great social event of the year, the J-Hop.

The great fraternity of Sigma Delta Kappa has grown by leaps and bounds since its inception and in that growth Lambda Chapter has played no little part. It is destined to play a still greater part the coming year. Lambda points with pride to the election of Judge L. Eugene Sharp to the post of Grand President. The Judge is an alumnus of the Detroit College of Law and is held in high esteem and admiration by the alumni.

We now look back and say, "Well done."

Phi Gamma Rho views with pride its accomplishment during the scholastic year, 1929-30. Not only has the fraternity grown in size, but the scope of activity has grown to such an extent that every man is an enthusiastic worker.

Scholastic attainment, fraternalism, and social association have all had their place on the calendar. All three will stand the test of retrospection.

Phi Gamma Rho is unique in its organization. The fraternity comprises not only the Detroit College of Law, but also the other three law schools of the State of Michigan.

The weekly meetings of Phi Gamma Rho have been purposeful, both from a business and intellectual point of view. Discussions on the law between members, addresses by members of the judiciary and leading practitioners, and moot trials, have tended to add something to every member.

With the close of the scholastic year, three men are added to the ever increasing list of Alumni, Max M. Marks, Saul Sarnoff and Irving S. Wolfe, Past Chancellor.

During the summer fraternal interest will be furthered by weekly luncheons at the Fort Shelby Hotel, the regular meeting place of Phi Gamma Rho.

In writing the past year's history of the Alpha Omega (Barrister Chapter), the chronicler will have to present here but a brief resume of its activities, lest he transgress the space allotted. The year, annus mirabilis, opened with a formal installation of officers elected to serve until January, 1931. Nathan R. Berke was given the vestments of Chancellor, Louis E. Wechsler, Vice-Chancellor; Harry H. Young, Master of Rolls; Irwin Kassoff, Master of Exchequer; Irving Galper, Marshal.

At a very impressive testimonial luncheon held in September, at the Book-Cadillac Hotel, Samuel X. Gaylord was made an honorary member. There were numerous monthly luncheons held at the Book-Cadillac, which were featured by valuable talks given by various prominent laymen and members of the legal profession.

The year closed with a formal dinner dance attended by the brothers of the fraternity and their ladies. There will be six of the brothers, who, by reason of their graduation in the classes of June, '30, and February, '31, will join the ranks of the Alumni. To them we extend our fraternal wishes for a happy and prosperous life, both within the sacred portals of the profession, and without. Alpha Omega (Barrister Chapter), will, as the years roll past the milestones of life, increase its strength in numbers, and carry high its banner "Justitia Et Veritas Vincit."

With the last election of officers the Lambda Kappa Epsilon set out on its most successful semester of its existence. Several new innovations were installed among the features of our activities.

Notable among the varied stunts were three prizes that were won by our representative orator and writer, Leon A. Consens. His masterpiece on "Women," earned a lengthy write-up in the newspaper. His article on "Prohibition," will soon be published in the "Liberty" magazine. They are still raving about his rendition of the "The Raven," by Poe, at the Temple Beth El.

Several prominent speakers attended various meetings and the fraternity as a whole benefited greatly. Among those who spoke were Nathaniel Goldstick, Assistant Corporation Counsel, Honorable Arthur E. Gordon, Presiding Judge of the Common Pleas Court, and the Honorable Frank P. Darin, State Representative.

With this graduating class the Lambda Kappa Epsilon will be represented by the Chancellor Bessman and Past Chancellor Utley.

All in all the fraternity in the two short years of its existence has accomplished an enormous amount of work, and with the incoming class of pledges can be found a world of excellent material, that will carry on, as well as we have in the past.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

President	HON HARRY J. DINGEMAN
Vice-President	HON. ALFRED MURPHY
Secretary	BYRON GELLER

The Alumni Association was organized for the purpose of providing an opportunity for the old grads to gather in reminiscence and for the exchange of memories of the good old days of way back. With such an amazingly large group of successful men as are numbered amongst the alumni of this school, it would seem that such an association would prove to be of great benefit in uniting our constantly growing alumni.

For divers reasons the association has not been as successful as it should be. One theory is the numerous banquets that the students sponsor every year in which the alumni are called upon either personally, by mail, or by telephone to attend. The D. C. L. Reunion, which is an annual affair, as well as the J-Hop, and the parties held by each class, are efforts to do the same thing that the association attempts.

A man's time is limited by his business or political obligation which makes it quite impossible for attendance at all functions. Nevertheless, the aim of this group is excellent and with proper stimulation could be evolved into a fine club. The President, Hon. Harry J. Dingeman, has been most generous in his time and such work should not go for naught.

Be that as it may, the alumni association can always be counted on to contribute an active support to any constructive movement which has the betterment of the college and standards of the profession as its goal.

TO A BILLBOARD

*My heart leaps up when I behold
A billboard springing from the leafy mold.
To no happier fate could I resign,
Than reading messages from a sign.*

*O, how wondrous it is to feel
That some day I'll own a Hupmobile.
It is a truth that I do know,
For a billboard told me so.*

*My mind was long a mental waste
Till I found a cigarette required taste.
I've learned things my best friend won't tell
'Neath a billboard's happy spell.*

*I'm familiar with a cure for eyes sore,
And a laxative that children cry for.
I've wandered long in strange localities
And now can name all fifty-seven varieties.*

*I know the powder used to wash silk underthings,
And the favorite fag of a dame who sings;
And all the shoes before they come to town;
'Midst such learning, how could I frown?*

*Though you blot out the scenery,
You tell the name of a better beanery.
Without you I'd buy the wrong style shoes,
And never know the type of hat to choose.*

*Then, when from this life I sadly go,
And near my next state, I shall know,
If I shall dwell in heavenly palace or hellish hotel
By whether you advertise a harp or a shovel.*

—Wilbur K. Yearstey.

Van Syckle: "What's that noise in the rear of the room?"

Wan, weak, weary, woebegone, and worried, Walter William Williams walter worked that Wednesday night. He was well nigh exhausted, but he stuck to his task. For 3 days and 2 nights he had toiled thus without even stopping to change the water on the goldfish who were now placidly floating on their backs oblivious to their dear master's tribulation. He passed his fevered brow under his equally clammy hand. Nervously he glanced at his watch. Only 27 hrs., 31 mins., and 18 seconds in which to complete the terrible task.

"Ah, if I had only died thirty years ago, I would not have this to go through with," he moaned.

Being a sensible man, he realized that this last thought was without practical value. It was a good idea, but it came too late.

Shuddering hard enough to cause the windows to rattle, he turned back to his task. No, it was too much. He could not, would not, go on. Suddenly conceiving a brilliant idea, he leaped limply to the telephone and arranged for his attorney to make out his income tax return.

SOMETHING MUST BE DONE

By HON. ROBERT M. THOMS

I am glad of an opportunity to bring a few words of cheer and welcome to the assembled delegates from the people of my native country. There are many matters of importance and interest to both your country and mine which I would like to discuss, but in the brief four hours which are allowed me, I can only hope to scratch the surface. I am not an alarmist, I am not a pessimist, but stupendous crises in our national life have arisen which deserve our earnest and serious consideration.

I had luncheon only yesterday with Premier Guiseppi Ropino in his tent on the Norwegian edge of the Sahara Desert, and after closing the door he said to me with the most profound seriousness "Something must be done. The world is fast going to the dogs. Something must be done." And later in the day, at his office in the Novenski Prospect in Petrograd, he again said "Something must be done."

Let us frankly consider what conditions we are facing today. Why is it so plain to any impartial observer that the world is going to the dogs? A statement in the St. Valentine issue of the American Journal of Trade and Commerce states that last year 4,721,324 $\frac{3}{5}$ net tons of raw sugar were shipped from Jamaica, Charleston, Savannah and Manila in ships flying the Swiss flag. The statement was to me incredible, but indicated a condition which is nothing less than intolerable and which cannot continue without righteous protest from every Syrian who loves his country. As my good friend the Premier has said, something must be done.

Only last year I read with much interest an item in the Larimee Gazette which stated in part that the average yield of Wyoming oil wells, exclusive of the counties of Goof, Butte, Bang and Whoop, was less than $7\frac{1}{2}$ pints net per fortnight. This is no laughing matter. It fortells a crisis which we and our children must inevitably face, and in this connection answer me this: What is to become of the vast army of unmarried mothers in Greenfield Township? Shall they have no voice in this matter? Are they to have no champion in the Halls of State? High taxes, high rents low wages, a rising cost of foodstuffs are traceable to but one cause, one vicious, repugnant, un-American cause which affects every one of us. And what is that cause? God knows, I don't, but it is absolutely indisputable that each and every one of these iniquities spring from that one cause.

And it is only with the faintest ray of hope for relief that we approach the perplexing question of refunding the French debt. In an open letter to Secretary of State Stimson last week, a letter which was reprinted by the press throughout the country and which gave rise to widespread discussion in social and diplomatic circles, I offered the following suggestion as a solution of this difficult question: the bi-monthly payment in gold of standard weight and fineness of 342,000 kopeks with interest, computed weekly on daily balances, of $1\frac{67}{100}$ per cent, with discount of 10—5—2 per cent on each invoice in ten days, f.o.b. Calcutta. I would also add a clause to the agreement that if these terms are not promptly met, a penalty of 34.2 pesos Mexican be added, and in addition all imports of perfumes, tortoise shell combs, shoe laces in pairs, imitation cameos and grape juice in less than pint quantities be barred. A merely casual inspection of this plan will reveal to the intelligent mind a satisfactory and permanent solution of the whole situation.

An illuminating sidelight on these problems is furnished in a short poem by Ingle-nook Blubber, the world renowned Eskimo poet, which is well worth your attention. He says:

Unconscious and unpassionate and still,
Cloud-like we lean and stare as bright leaves stare,
And gradually along the stranger hill
Our unvalled loves thin out on vacuous air.

Does not that make the whole situation clear and go far in establishing an entente cordiale which must result finally in peace and happiness for the entire universe.

And now, in conclusion, let me urge every member of this organization to get behind this movement and put it over with a bang. If every man will put his shoulder to the wheel we will make this a hundred per cent drive. I hope that every captain and lieutenant will be on the job every minute and make certain that every member has a chance to subscribe. If we all put a lot of pep into this thing I am sure it will be a great success and in the end we shall find that our beloved city of Des Moines, of which we are so proud, will be the center of the aircraft industry of the world.

THE GENTLE ART OF BRIEFING CASES

BULLETIN

AFTER diligent search on the part of our wide-awake reportorial staff, the Forum has scooped the Brief Case and discovered that a "merger" has taken place within the walls of our college building.

All D. C. L. athletic activities, including the chess team, have been taken over by the D. I. T. This news will, we feel sure, be received with a distinct shock by that large body of loyal D. C. L.'s students who followed the teams so faithfully and always looked forward to the pep rallies, trips, and joyous celebrations of hard won victories. As one of the few colleges of the country that had escaped the censure of the famous Carnegie Bulletin, we were holding our heads high and looking confidently to the future. However, we can still adjourn to the Reno Rathskeller, and relive the old days again over a "Coke."

MORAL: ATHLETES SHOULD NOT STUDY LAW.
